

Flights strategies

Let me start with strategies for flying to Italy and getting to the Dolomites, a very important part of your trip!

AIRPORTS NEAR THE DOLOMITES

"A" Bolzano Airport – ABD / BZO

"B" Innsbruck airport

"C" Verona or Brescia airports

"D" Venezia Marco Polo airport

"E" Bergamo Orio al Serio airport

"F" Milano airports

"G" Out of Map: Munich Airport

"A" Bolzano Airport – ABD / BZO

Landing in Bolzano to the ABD - Airport Bolzano Dolomites (BZO) is surely the best solution to arrive here in the Dolomites!

The regional airline SKYALPS (skyalps.com) serves Bolzano with a lot of direct flights to the main important international airports of Europe and is in constant increase of new destinations.

Actually there are operative flights to London, Rotterdam, Brussels, Düsseldorf, Berlin, Hamburg, Copenhagen, that you can connect with your international flight from your country of origin.

This is a great solution to landing directly in the heart of the Dolomites without the complications and lost time of transfers by bus/train from any other airport nearing the Dolomites.

Take your time to check the possible combinations of international flights arriving from US, Canada or Australia that you can combine with the Sky Alps regional flights.

If you are interested in choosing one, let me know because I can send you one free personal voucher for your luggages.

The ABD - BZO Airport in Bolzano is a small and super modern airport near the town, every 15 minutes an urban bus (ticket on board: 1 €) goes from the airport to the downtown, but if you prefer I can welcome you directly at the arrival flights exit door with my car.

“B” The Innsbruck airport is a good alternative

The airport of Innsbruck have some connections with the Frankfurt airport (Lufthansa international flights from Australia and USA/Canada) or with London. In this case EasyJet propose some interesting “low cost” flights.

The airport of Innsbruck is connected with urban shuttle bus (every 18 minutes) with the railway station. From Innsbruck to Bolzano there are lot of trains in directed to Bolzano, generally 7 or 8 daily (1,5 hours medium travel time). See the Austrian railways timetable.

In alternative FlixBus offer different travel by bus to Bolzano, click the link to check your best option.

Many clients that arrive from UK take the Easy Jet flight, its practical and cheap! Innsbruck is only 1 hour by car from/to Bolzano, if you prefer I can welcome you directly at this airport with my FIAT Doblò car - 7 places.

“C” The Verona airport – Valerio Catullo

The Verona – Valerio Catullo Airport and the sub-airport of Brescia Montichiari have new interesting low cost flights with many European cities.

The Verona airport is a new concurrent of the traditional Bergamo low cost flights airport.

Actually the airport flight plan is renewed with many new entry, look the actual planning at the airport webpage.

Both airports are connected with shuttle busses (ticket on board) to the railway station of Verona Porta Nuova. From the Valerio Catullo airport you travel for about 45 minutes.

From Verona to Bolzano there are many direct trains (1,15 to 2 hours),
Look the Italian railways timetable of Trenitalia.

In alternative FlixBus offer different travel by bus to Bolzano, click the link to check your best option.

“D” The Venezia airport – Marco Polo

This is the best airport solution if you like visit Venice before or after our programs.

ATTENTION: Venice is “a classic tourist trap” with super crazy expensive prices for the accommodations etc... Ask us per mail some logistic info before your Venice visit.

The Venice Marco Polo airport is always crowded (full of international tourists) but is easy to take the bus to the railway station and then the train to Bolzano (3,5 hours medium travel time).

From Venice to Bolzano there are many direct trains (1,15 to 2 hours),
Look the Italian railways timetable of Trenitalia.

In alternative FlixBus offer different travel by bus to Bolzano, click the link to check your best option.

“E” The Bergamo airport – Orio al Serio

The Bergamo Orio al Serio airport is the base camp of the Ryanair in Italy. Many flight depart and arrive for all main European cities with low cost. It's sure a good option if you come from London or arrive from on other north European country.

IMPORTANT: When you exit from the airport you find a large bus stop station, ask here where is the first bus to the Milano Centrale railway station. Every half hour depart buses to Milano, there are many different private companies that offer this service with low prices (sometime at only 5 Euros).

From Milano to Bolzano there are many direct trains (3,5 to 4,5 hours), look the Italian railways timetable of Trenitalia.

In alternative FlixBus offer different travel by bus to Bolzano, click the link to check your best option.

By rental car you need only 2,5 hours all in motorway.

“F” The Milano international airports – Linate or Malpensa

The Milano international airports – Linate or Malpensa are two of the bigger Italian airports where arrive many international flight . US airways, Delta, Continental and many of the main air companies have Milano as destination. Business mens use usually Milano for work travels.

Personally i don't suggest the Malpensa airport because is about 1,45 hour west of Milano, better Linate airport because is located 40 min east of Milano (in direction of the Dolomites). This is a not secondary aspect if you rent a car, both are Milano airports but the difference of travel time is about 2 hours....

Both airports are connected with the Milano railway station with shuttle bus service. From Malpensa you need of 1,45 (sometime 2 hours) depending of the traffic conditions. From Linate generally 45 min are a standard time.

From Milano to Bolzano there are many direct trains (3,5 to 4,5 hours), look the Italian railways timetable of Trenitalia.

In alternative FlixBus offer different travel by bus to Bolzano, click the link to check your best option.

"OUT OF MAP" Munich airport

All considerations for Milan Malpensa are similar per the Munich airport. Different is the connection time with the Munich railway station because from the Munich airport depart a modern and fast metrò. Look the german railways webpage.

In alternative FlixBus offer different travel by bus to Bolzano, click the link to check your best option.

The Munich airport is one of the most important central European international airports, specially for the flight that arrive from east and far east.

Consider this airport if part of your travel is in central Europe.

Choose the right strategy of flights is the first important aspect of your travel. Don't hesitate to ask me more information per email.
